Omaha Beach

5 Years After 'D' Day

Some Americans profess to be like the Chinese. Read nothing, hear nothing, think nothing about the problems of government and the world. They, like the Chinese, are awakened from their slumber only when events come thundering up to their door.

The Chinese, however, by every nation that attacks them, America has not yet been defeated but she has been many times involved in war — and always at serious cost in dead and wounded.

Our generation, therefore, is resolved more than its ancestors to look into the causes of war and ascertain by what strategy we can prevent, or at least postpone, it.

Well, one object lesson rises up this very day in the anniversary of "D" day. Five years ago on June 6, 1944, the Americans and British and their minor allies among the Free French and Poles in exile, went ashore at Omaha Beach and launched the invasion of Normandy.

It was the long-awaited main-line attack on Hitler's Fortress Europe. We had had excursions in North Africa, and in Italy — but this time all the chips were down.

We went ashore, and stayed ashore. Hitler's empire collapsed. And Europe returned to peace. But the kind of peace that keeps newspapers and radio full of heavy political news, so that sometimes we are tempted to turn away and try to forget it all.

But Omaha Beach will not let itself be forgotten. There Americans fought and died. And while they might have fought and died anywhere, it should have been where it was, nor against such odds.

We as Americans owe it to the fighting youth of this and all generations to come to make sure that in the event of another war we shall be certain of a friendly foothold on the European continent — so we may pick our own fighting place, instead of having to wade through water before the guns of an entrenched enemy.

This is just common sense. That anyone can understand. And, oddly enough, it happens also to be the policy of our astute diplomats and military men.

So, when the heavy political news rolls around the capitals of the earth and you wonder if it's all worth while, remember Omaha Beach — it costs fewer American lives if you've got one foot in the door instead of both feet in the door.

When war comes, that is — and war always comes.

Moss Tells of Salvation Army Work

K. E. Moss, Field Representative for the Salvation Army from Memphis spoke to the Hope Lions club today at noon at the Barlow Hotel.

Mr. Moss told the club that through the Hope Salvation Army branch, the committee last year many needy people were aided in a variety of ways, needy families were aided with groceries, clothing, medicine and hospitalization, transportation, to the state hospital at Little Rock, and transients were helped with transportation, and food and lodging.

The local committee is composed of Guy E. Basye, Chairman; Roy Anderson, Treasurer; Miss Norma Lewis, Secretary; Foy Hammons, James H. Jones, J. E. Brown, George Peck, Rev. J. E. Cooper, Albert Graves, Mrs. Alicia Jones, Rev. Steve Cook, Claude Tiller, Jr., Rev. H. Paul Holdridge, and E. D. Ryshtie.

Mr. Moss told the club members that the second annual campaign for funds would get under way this week with letters being sent out by Mr. Basye, the chairman, to the committee asking for funds for this year's quota of $2,400, and next week the general solicitation of the business houses of the city and some of the homes would be solicited, especially those who do not respond to the letter already sent.

The annual campaign eliminates the taking of collections with the tamborine as was the method of raising funds in Hope in past years and only one campaign for funds is conducted annually.

Thieves Steal $26,000 Worth of Jewelry

New York, June 6 — (UP) — Jewel thieves raided the lavishly furnished apartment of multimillionaire William Heiss over the week end and escaped with $26,000 in gems, police disclosed today.

Police said, however, that the thieves overlooked $100,000 worth of jewels left in the same drawer with those that were stolen. They said a second fortune in jewels, left in another drawer, also was overlooked.

The gems were taken from the room of Adrienne Heiss at the swank Hampshire house. Miss Heiss is the 21-year-old daughter of the oil and shipping magnate.

Truman Names Woman U. S. Treasurer

Washington, June 6 — (AP) — President Truman today nominated Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark, vivacious Richmond, Kas., banker, as the first woman treasurer of the United States.

Mrs. Clark, a 49-year-old divorcee was supported for the post by Mrs. India Edwards, head of the women's division of the Democratic national committee.

She flew into Washington over the weekend after a hurry-up call from Mrs. Edwards. Her's is the first of several expected nominations of women to high federal offices, including diplomatic posts.

Within the Democratic party these moves are accepted as recognition for the part women played in helping elect Mr. Truman last fall.

Mrs. Clark, a member of the Democratic national committee since 1936, has been a banker, farmer, actress, store owner, and grain elevator operator.

As treasurer she would succeed William A. Julian, killed in a car crash a week ago after serving in the post since 1933.

The $10,330-a-year treasurer's post requires the incumbent's signature on a U. S. currency, of folding money. Asked about her handwriting, Mrs. Clark laughed that "it's terrible."

Had Another Source Says Chambers

New York, June 6 — (AP) — Whitaker Chambers, ex-Communist courier, testified today that he had another "source" in the state department in addition to Alger Hiss, now on trial on perjury charges.

Chambers, chief government witness in the charges against the former high state department official, made his claim of another contact in the state department under cross-examination by Hiss' chief counsel.

"Leaving aside Mr. Hiss, did you have a confederate in the state department?" Attorney Lloyd Paul Stryker asked him.

"We had a source in the state department," the witness replied. Under further questioning Chambers said the source was employed in the trade agreement section of the state department.

Earlier, Stryker drew two new admissions from Chambers that he himself had committed perjury. It brought to three his confessions of perjurious acts since the trial began.

Chambers acknowledged that he knowingly lied under oath in statements before the house committee on un-American activities last August.

Hiss, one-time high state department official, is accused of lying when he denied before a spy-hunting grand jury that he turned over secret government papers to Chambers for transmission to a Red spy network. He was indicted on two perjury counts.

Just before the trial adjourned Friday for a weekend recess, Chambers admitted under cross-examination that he had committed perjury before the same grand jury that indicted Hiss.

Stryker, slashing at Chambers' veracity as a witness, drew the new perjury admissions shortly after the trial resumed today.

The first false statement he made under oath, Chambers testified, was in answer to a question by a house committee member, Rep. Nixon (R-Calif.) and the second in answer to another question by former Rep. Karl Mundt (R-SD).

The reply to Nixon's query, the witness related, was a denial that he knew of any Communist activities of Alger Hiss involving espionage.

Chambers told the committee at that time that Hiss "submitted himself for the two or three years, I knew him as a dedicated and disciplined Communist." He added, however, that he had no actual evidence of Hiss' party membership.

He and his family reside in the Davis' apartments on East Third Street.

Governor to Discuss New Bridge Approach

West Memphis, June 6 — (AP) — City officials will meet with Gov. Sid McMath tomorrow for a discussion of the proposed new approach to the bridge now under construction across the Mississippi river near here.

The city will be represented officially by Mayor P. M. Dacus and the city council. The meeting is open to the public, and many businessmen are expected to attend.

Businessmen and city officials have protested construction of the new approach, which would bypass the city to avoid traffic congestion.

Questioned Loyalty of Atom Expert

Washington, June 6 — (AP) — Senator Hickenlooper (Iowa) said today the man who drafts top secret atomic reports to congress once was suspended because the FBI questioned his loyalty.

When Hickenlooper tossed this out at a senate-house investigation of the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC), AEC Chairman David S. Lilienthal demanded that the person involved be summoned for testimony.

Hickenlooper told his congressional colleagues that the AEC employee, who was suspended because of his "emergency" security clearance on August 8, 1947.

It was not until March, 1948, that an FBI check turned up "serious derogatory information" about the individual, Hickenlooper added.

Hickenlooper said the person involved was furnished with a statement of the charges against him and suspended in April. He was given a hearing in May, the Iowa senator continued, before a board of three AEC employees, including two scientists and a lawyer.

Although the person was mentioned in the 5-page FBI report as giving derogatory information about the suspended person, Hickenlooper said, only two of these were called for testimony and a third was interviewed over the phone.

He said the board called 15 witnesses suggested by the suspended employee and recommended unanimously that he be given security clearance.

This was done in which Hickenlooper said was a "speedup process" on June 18, 1948.

Before Hickenlooper brought this up Lilienthal had testified that the AEC is keeping some persons with doubtful records on the payroll because that seems safer than firing them. He said some of their jobs when the army was running the atomic project.

Under questioning from a senate-house committee, the AEC chairman said he knows that atomic developments are a "primary target" for Communist spy activity.

But, Lilienthal insisted, there are some circumstances where persons with doubtful records should be kept at work.

As examples, he said some persons were cleared for work under wartime army control and learned top atomic secrets.

With "certain precautions," he said the employment of these persons was continued. He added, however, that if they had applied for jobs after the civilian commission was in control, the AEC probably would not have been willing to take the "calculated risk" the army did in hiring them.

The senate-house atomic energy committee is investigating the commission's policies and work as a result of charges by Hickenlooper that there has been "incredible mismanagement" under Lilienthal. Hickenlooper demands that Lilienthal be fired.

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican floor leader, has suggested that congress create a little "FBI" with security like J. Edgar Hoover in charge — to head up atomic security.

One of the grounds for Hickenlooper's complaints has been that too many persons were cleared for atomic work in "emergencies" without any advance FBI investigation beyond a check of any justice department files that might carry information about them.

Wherry said he is disturbed not only by that but by the fact that persons who study followings in non-secret fields aren't investigated and that atomic project managers can overrule their security officers if they choose.

Arroll L. Wilson, commission general manager, has testified that in two cases he overruled his chief security officers to keep on the payroll two persons the officer had classified as "poor risks."

With Wilson, Lilienthal was called back on the stand today for questioning by Hickenlooper.

Hickenlooper is following a strategy that he keeps to himself — even Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) and other fellow Republicans don't know what he may take up next as he works on his case.

Today is D-Day Plus Five Years — the Invasion of Grass Seems Equally Impossible

By HARVEY HUDSON

Omaha Beach, France, June 6 — (AP) — Today is D-day plus five years.

On June 6, 1944 church bells all over the Allied world pealed to herald the invasion of Adolf Hitler's "fortress Europe" by shock troops of the Western democracies.

As they fought their way into France, soaking the sands of this beach with their blood, the prayers of freedom-loving peoples went with them.

The impossible had come to pass. The "order built to live thousand years" was pierced 996 years before its promised millennium.

Today the invasion seems equally impossible.

Grass grows over the old foxholes. Cattle roam the fields. French peasants till the soil with the "boys from Belsen" — and won.

But offshore lay the rustling hulls of the ships sunk to make an artificial harbor so the Allies could land their overwhelming production of their war-factories and the men who had left peace behind them to man that product.

And high on the bluff which overlooks the landing place lie the heroes of their comrades could cut deeper into the rotting fabric of Hitler's empire.

Yesterday was dedicated to these men by a world which seems not to have found the universal brotherhood they so nobly sought.

Two little normal girls—symbols of the world's hope for the future—placed wreaths where the men who died to make that future were laid to rest.

Two Americans represented the thousands of their countrymen who represented the United States five years ago.

They were Brig. Gen. Joseph O'Hare, military attache at the embassy in Paris and Capt. Smith Hutton, naval attache.

A French naval guard of honor, a drum and bugle corps and an honor guard from American Legion Post No. 1 in Paris seemed lost on the beach which memory's people with the thousand's of soldiers who poured over it as part of a military maneuver Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has called the "crusade in Europe."

French villagers held ceremonies all along the invasion coast. Overhead flew a U. S. Air Force B-17 flying fortress scattering flower petals.

And perched in a tree, fallen like Hitler's dream of world control, lay the wreckage of a German plane.

George R. Clemens, (of Vicksburg, Miss.) former lieutenant-colonel in the 487th anti-aircraft artillery battalion, now with the 487th anti-aircraft artillery in Paris, said his gunners shot it down on the afternoon of D-day.

Another pilgrim to Omaha Beach was O. A. Greer of Kansas City, national president of the War Dads association.

None Hurt When Auto Overturns

Nobody was seriously hurt early last night when an automobile driven by Bob Turner struck a "sand pocket" and overturned near Washington on Highway No. 4. Mr. Turner and family escaped with minor injuries. The auto was badly damaged.

In a minor accident over the weekend-end a car owned by J. C. Gibson of near Patmos collided with a truck owned by Chas. Smith of South Main resulting in little damage.

It Is Strange Punishment When It's Necessary to Kill Friends to Defeat Enemy

By HAL BOYLE

St. Lo, France, June 6 — (AP) — Here is this town five years ago many friends and our Allies killed many friends while trying to dislodge the enemy. Yet we still have many friends here, although our bombs destroyed their homes and many of their relatives.

It is a strange punishment in wartime that it is sometimes necessary to kill the friend you love in order to defeat the enemy you hate.

That is a lesson that people in our broad land of power can never afford to forget. Our young men came from across the sea in the cause of freedom—but to many St. Lo patriots the price of freedom was death.

Here in St. Lo, man paid an expensive price for the liberty that everyone craves. And if America doesn't back the freedom principle, then it has all gone for naught.

So many stay-at-home Europeans judge us too quickly, without knowing we are the most morally impatient people on earth. This is our hour of power. And we are trying to use our world power, for all our human and inhuman errors, to make it as free from fear and want as we can.

Violence Takes Lives of 12 in Arkansas

By United Press

At least 12 persons died tragically in Arkansas over the weekend. Three persons drowned in two separate mishaps, three children were found stuffed into an old ice box at a farm house near Walnut Ridge, and three persons died in traffic mishaps.

A 14-year-old girl died of injuries suffered when she was struck by a baseball, a man was fatally wounded in a gunfight at Jasper, and a Stuttgart rice mill employee hanged himself.

The list of tragedies was headed by the mysterious deaths of three small children whose bodies were found crammed into a nice box at the Ed Chastain home near Walnut Ridge. Funeral services were held yesterday for James Delbert Chastain, two; Joyce Ann Chastain, nine; and Shirley Ramsey, six.

The bodies of two men whose boat capsized in a whirlpool on the White river near Batesville were found yesterday not far from the scene of the accident. The victims were J. M. Everett, 34, of Batesville, and Bob Kackley, 36, of North Little Rock.

The third accident victim was Clyde E. Hux, 27, an El Dorado carpenter. His boat capsized in the Ouachita river. The body was recovered a few hours later.

Three persons killed in automobile accidents were George C. McKinney, 25, of Warren; Oscar L. Stone, 46, of Arkadelphia; and Billy Webster, 20, of DeVitt.

A 14-year-old girl, Jeanette McCray of Blytheville, died of injuries suffered when she was struck in the head by a baseball.

Elford Kilgore, a 40-year-old trucker, was fatally wounded in a gunfight last night at Jasper. Officers are holding Paul Springer, 40, of Jasper.

Body of Arthur Perkins, a 52-year-old Stuttgart rice mill worker, was found hanging in a bedroom closet at his home on the old Stuttgart air base.

Plucky Youth Succumbs to Severe Burns

Vernon, Tex., June 6 — (AP) — Donnie Woodward, plucky 10-year-old farm boy who amazed doctors by surviving horrible burns for almost a month, died today.

The young son of a tenant farmer had been hovering between life and death since May 10, when 70 percent of his body was burned by surviving horrible burns for almost a month, died today.

For weeks the boy had alternately rallied and then weakened. Only yesterday he had revived enough to talk to his parents. He asked about his pet cow "Old Jersey" and didn't want anyone else to milk her.

Letters and gifts had been arriving for weeks as attribute to his courage.

A brother accidentally tossed blazing gasoline on Donnie. The boy had been kept under an oxygen tent in this small north Texas town ever since he was burned. He was given frequent blood transfusions, though it was difficult for physicians to find a vein under his scarred skin.

Late last month Donnie said "I want to live. I know they say I can't live, but gee, I sure want to."

Meanwhile, the child star's agent reported she would retire from all screen activities for several months. Margaret was to have been the voice of Alice in Walt Disney's production of "Alice in Wonderland."

But her agent, Vic Orsatti, said the deal was nullified. The child star's mother, Mrs. Jenn Harris, explained that Mrs. Sylvio was too upset to accompany Margaret to a studio and Margaret also was too upset to do the film.

"We thought it would be the best thing for both of them to rest a while," Mrs. Harris said.

Man Hears Sermon on Faithfulness, Kills Himself

Galveston, Tex., June 6 — (AP) — A young Chicago man heard a sermon on faithfulness and then shot himself in their bottle-trewn hotel apartment yesterday, his woman companion told police.

Detective Chief William J. Burns identified the dead man as Robert Emmett Benjamin, 33, of Crystal Lake, Ill., and Chicago. He said the woman is Mrs. Martha H. Pfeiffer, 27, Crystal Lake divorcee.

Other guests in their Galveston beach apartment hotel heard a shot and broke into the room to find Benjamin dead on the floor, shot through the heart.

Burns quoted Mrs. Pfeiffer as saying Benjamin shot himself and that he then attempted unsuccessfully to shoot herself with a Czech automatic revolver.

Mrs. Pfeiffer told Burns Benjamin rose early yesterday, attended a church where he heard a sermon on faithfulness, returned to their apartment and unburied himself. She said he talked of the futility of life.

U. S. Deficit Is Alarming to Some Lawmen

By LYLE C. WILSON

Washington, June 6 — (UP) — In terms of red ink by which deficits are indicated for a business or a government, the United States seems to be headed back to the dark days of 1932.

That was a year of depression crisis which accumulated a treasury deficit of a little more than $3,000,000,000. There had been a deficit the year before, too, although much smaller, and the two together almost frightened the nation out of its wits.

There is no such crisis now. But barring miracles of economy in congress, the next fiscal year beginning on July 1 will run up a larger deficit than was scored in 1932. Some economy-minded members of congress are alarmed.

Senator Byrd, (D-Va.), an apple grower himself, has been warning the nation for months that government spending is the rotten apple in our economic barrel. He says that lone apple will spoil all the rest and that we had better get rid of it fast. Byrd has not had much luck with his argument.

The house of representatives has come up with a economy majority usually when government economy votes were taken on specific proposals to cut this or that government appropriation. The senate rather consistently has restored the cuts or upped the overall spending figure.

There was a hint, but no more, last week that the senate may be swinging toward Byrd's point of view. It voted to trim nearly $13,000,000 from the $74,000,000 appropriation approved by the house to support the state, commerce and justice departments in the next fiscal year. The state, commerce and justice departments are a long way removed from direct relation to the voters. It did not require any political courage to take some money away from such.

With most of the routine money bills out of the way for this session, congressmen are expected to be hoping to remedy their expending record by a joint resolution which will direct President Truman to cut expenditures by 5 per cent below the sum appropriated by congress.

Some congressmen are even optimistic. Sen. Millard E. Tydings, (D-Md), told a Baltimore interviewer yesterday that he was confident there would be a real start toward economy at this session of congress.

Sylvio Blames Child Actress for Trouble

Hollywood, June 6 — (UP) — Orchestra Leader Don Sylvio Blames child actress Margaret O'Brien for his trouble.

Mrs. Gladys O'Brien Sylvio revealed plans to annul her three-month marriage last week.

"I can't do battle with a little child," Sylvio said. "But there's just so much a man can take."

When the 42-year-old band leader married the 12-year-old child star's mother in Palm Beach, Fla., Margaret wept. Mrs. Sylvio said she understood now why her pigtails danced when she was in a daze.

"I was being rushed into it, and Margaret knew it," she explained. "She knew I was unhappy. That made her unhappy."

Sylvio said he and his wife lived in separate apartments until little Margaret could "get used to having a man around the house. She is a sensitive child and I didn't want to rush things."

He said he intended to fight his wife's annulment suit for several months. Margaret was to have been the voice of Alice in Walt Disney's production of "Alice in Wonderland."

But her agent, Vic Orsatti, said the deal was nullified. The child star's mother, Mrs. Jenn Harris, explained that Mrs. Sylvio was too upset to accompany Margaret to a studio and Margaret also was too upset to do the film.

"We thought it would be the best thing for both of them to rest a while," Mrs. Harris said.

'Appeased' Red Operative Says Witness

Washington, June 6 — (AP) — A one-armed Buffalo, N. Y. rubber salesman who helped trap a wartime Russian spy testified today an FBI agent told him state department wanted to "appease" the Red operative.

The witness, before the house un-American activities committee, was Joseph J. Francis of Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Francis, employed by the Hooker Electro Chemical Co., served as a photographer and deliveryman. Mrs. Francis got the documents from the Bell Aircraft company, Buffalo, where she was librarian, and Francis delivered them to the spy.

The Francis related how they worked with the FBI in feeding information to the Russians under FBI supervision.

The Russian was identified as a Soviet purchasing agent named Andrei Schvechenko.

Francis said Schvechenko instructed them to deliver rolls of 35-millimeter film to him in New York. The Russian supplied a camera, and the film, Francis explained, and Francis photographed the documents at his home.

The Russian arranged meetings with Francis by sending picture postcards of the Empire State building, Francis said. Each film meant Francis was to be in New York the next weekend.

Two deliveries were postponed at the request of the FBI, Francis told the committee. He said he protested the time because the entire operation was "pretty nerve wracking."

Francis said he objected even more strongly at the second delay, but was told the FBI had instructions from the state department to "hold tight on the surveillance of Schvechenko," Francis said. An agent told him the department wanted to "appease him," referring to the Soviet agent.

MEXSANA MEDICATED POWDER

DOROTHY DIX Unhappiest Age

Dear Miss Dix: I am a girl of 14 and I do not get along well with my parents. They said I could go out with boys when I was 14. If they went along. No boy wants to go out with a girl who has to drag her Papa and Mama along. Why can't I go out with boys alone? Because they say I can't take care of myself. If I can't take care of myself now, when can I?

Mother is afraid to admit that I am growing up because it makes her appear older. Dad is the same way. He is Mother's yes-man. I know I am not very respectful, but they haven't given me any respect then. They have only given me a reason to hate them.

My grandfather lives with us and he is trying to rear me. He did a very poor job on his own daughter. Now of the kids I go with like him and I don't blame them.

Please excuse the typing of this letter, but I am so mad I don't care where the keys are. It would help me a lot if you would answer this and tell me what to do.

Answer: One of the beautiful fictions to which we give lip service when we are 40 years old is that youth is the happiest time of life, when everything is rose-colored, when we have no cares, and when we go about singing merry roundelays. Nothing is less true.

Childhood is a time of stress and strain and friction and frustration and grating tyrannies in which one is made to go to bed when one isn't sleepy; to eat when one isn't hungry; to do things one doesn't want to do and leave undone things one is dying to do. And if anybody thinks it is fun to be a kid, they should turn back the clock about 20 years.

Parents Can't Help
It is the struggle of youth to get out of the hobbled period when they are neither babes nor grownups, that causes so many parents to lose their heads and tear their hair over what they call the ingratitude of their children. "And there is nothing that we can do to help them," mourn the bewildered fathers and mothers, "for when we try to protect them they think we are persecuting them, and when we attempt to teach them high ideals, they call us old-fashioned and scorn our opinions."

Of course, it is a shocking thing when parents realize that their 13 and 14-year-olds regard them as fussbudget old creatures who appetite later if you didn't watch. She lightened her hold on the ax, swallowed quickly, and pulled one of the bodies free of the pile.

The islanders collected two battered buckets, one of which held water, four scorched and sodden blankets, and a half of two cot mattresses from the hut. George and Fred had occupied them. There were no changes of clothes.

One the other hand, there was a large assortment of tools and plenty of planks. Mable Jones and Harding had little trouble constructing a shelter in the angle of the veranda steps and the part of ruined wall.

Henry Harding had prepared kindling, whittled from the dry inside of pine boards, and was trying to get a spark by striking steel against various kinds of stone.

Mabel Jones had hacked away at the mutton with Harding's pocket knife had some nine good buckets with added rainwater, waiting for the fire to make a sort of stew.

Agnes Firth returned from the lower storeroom on the verge of tears. "It's so maddening when you know there's food down under all that rock," she complained. She looked around suddenly. "Where's Mr. Sillwell? He left me. He went on ahead with the peaches!"

"Nona," McGuire said wearily. "You should have trusted him, Aggie. He's probably down making a trade. And I don't think the rest of us will get either peaches or whiskey from the deal. I know George likes peaches."

"But they were all we found! They were for all of us!" Miss Firth said. She sat down on the soggy edge of a mattress out of the rain.

Bea Cosgrove stood up. "We've got to have a fire. I'll go and try to get a match or a piece of burning wood. I don't think George'll shoot. He's had a chance to think it over now. Cool off."

No one made any suggestion, no one tried to dissuade her. Once again she went over the ground around the saucer depression.

A shout and a clatter of rock brought her attention to a hurrying bent-over figure on the trail to the cave. A little streamer of smoke slipped out behind the smoldering pieces of two by four he carried. (To Be Continued) haven't kept up with the times. But that's the way it is, and that is why so many children have neither respect nor affection for their fathers and mothers.

It is only after children grow up and have youngsters to their own that they appreciate Mom and Pop.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I have been married for 13 years and love my wife very much, but she doesn't believe that I do because she says that I do not do anything to show her that I care for her. For instance, she would like me to watch our little girl while she goes to the movies, and I won't do it. I tell her that she should take the child along with her whenever she goes away from home.

She also asks me where I have been when I come home at two and three o'clock in the morning. What can I do to assure her that I love her.

Answer: Well, Andy, you know the old proverb about the proof of the pudding being the eating, and inasmuch, as you do nothing to make your wife's life pleasant and easier, you couldn't prove to a jury, still less to your wife, that you have any regard for her.

Take the two small favors she asks of you. Housework is a dull and unexciting proposition, yet when you wife asks you to keep one or two little daughters, you refuse to do it. Likewise, you demand that your wife take the child with her whenever she leaves the house, when everybody knows it is no recreation to drag a kid around with you when you step out for a little diversion.

And, furthermore, you resent your wife asking where you have been when you have been playing around until three o'clock in the morning, which doesn't indicate that you have gone to any trouble to give her a pleasant evening. Men who love their wives don't treat them the way you do yours. (Released by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)
